The seminar was well conducted and was quite informative. The workbook contains much useful information and has a valuable listings of resources and references.

We had hoped that holding it offsite would correct this problem since night sessions and office interruptions could be minimized. We still feel this is

This was a highly interactive class; they questioned everything; they challenged everything; and they gave the class an overall effectiveness rating of 4.5. Katharine Graham, chairman of the Washington Post Company, spoke to a packed auditorium on 16 November under the auspices of the Agency's Guest Speaker series. Speaking on the topic, "Secrecy and the Press," she made an articulate, nonpolemical case for the media that stimulated a thoughtful discussion in the question-andanswer period. Some excerpts from a subsequent AIM exchange:

Mrs. Graham believes that not all Chief Executives and not all intelligence officers have the highest good of the electorate in mind; Presidents and intelligence officers have similar feelings about the press! The system continues to lumber along, however, and dialogues such as the one yesterday help us all remember our responsibilities, I The upside of the situation is that the intelligence community and the Fourth Estate really do have both professional skill and integrity, while the downside is that there are individuals in each group who abuse the power and license granted by the democracy under which they operate.

Mrs. Graham sounds like an experienced professional with a lot of sense.... Many professions [besides the media] are self-regulating (doctors, lawyers, dentists, accountants, etc.) Theoretically at least, they all maintain professional standards through various boards and procedures. WE in the intelligence community are the ones most tightly constrained by external and internal requirements. Therein lies the rub.
